

ACTIVITY 2 WHAT WE WANT / DON'T WANT IN OUR PROCESS

Having read about our own processes we'd like to invite you to think about your own activist process: what is it you'd very much like to experience, live, share, achieve? What is it you'd definitely like to avoid?

We invite you to collect these items by finishing the sentences. You can give several endings to the same sentence, and those that don't inspire you can just skip..

Take this as a first brainstorming exercise – individual or collective..

What I cherish is:

I'm concerned that...

What would be important to me is...

It would defy the purpose if...

I'd be happy if...

I'd feel bad if...

I wish...

The biggest mistake would be to...

I'd like to make sure that...

I would not want people to...

I'd like to give importance to...

We-d miss out if...

ACTIVITY 3 PROCESS MAP

How do you imagine your activist process ? Make a first draft of each step, starting with the motivation to work on a specific subject / on a specific place / with a specific group of people? Make your own process map, to help you identify the steps and explore what you may need to do to make each step possible. Make this process map as a personal or collective brainstorming, being ready to change it completely if needed
